

An Update on Jim Ehrman

MINISTERING ON THE CAMPUS OF YALE UNIVERSITY

Jim serves as both Executive Director and Research Fellow at the Rivendell Institute at Yale, a study center exploring the intersection of Christian faith and contemporary scholarship at one of the nation's most influential universities. Through research, public conversation, and spiritual formation among both faculty and students, Jim seeks to restore the Christian conversation at Yale, while he points it to its own motto, "Lux et Veritas", meaning "Light and Truth".

"The Rivendell Institute played a singular role in shaping my worldview as a follower of Christ. The biblical mandate for the responsible stewardship of power must guide every Christian in the work of the government, in the service to nation, for the glory of God."

-Dr. William Inboden

Former Senior Director for Strategic Planning on the National Security Council at the White House

For the past twenty years, the staff of the Rivendell Institute have raised their own salaries so that all financial funding coming into the institute can be used to support its programs.

This has allowed Rivendell's lectures, bible studies, symposiums and mentoring programs to be some of the most influential at Yale and also serves to role-model a life of radical trust in God to the Yale student and faculty body.

Would you consider joining with Jim in this important work?

If so, you can send your gift earmarked for Jim to the Global Ministries

"The universities, then, directly and indirectly, dominate the world; their influence is so pervasive and total that whatever problem afflicts them is bound to have far-reaching repercussions through-out the entire fabric of Western civilization. No task is more crucial and urgent today than to examine the state of the mind and spirit in the Western University."

-Charles Malik,
Christian Statesman and former President - U.N. General Assembly
